

The White Linen Nurse – Eleanor Hallowell Abbott

The White Linen Nurse

By Eleanor Hallowell Abbott (1872-1958)

Throughout three years of school, Rae Malgregor had been perfectly pliant, perfectly compliant to all the demands placed on her. But now, on the eve of graduation, she couldn't go on with the mask of artificiality and the air of perfection. She had been chasing this nursing job three whole years, but there was just no wag to it! The Superintendent was stunned. Her best student! The Senior Surgeon was all grey granite business and livid that his time was being taken up with a hysterical nurse! And yet, though he wouldn't have admitted it to anyone, especially himself, his interest was piqued. (Introduction by MaryAnn)
